

I just tried a new activity with my residents that I was a little worried about. We planned a fondue party! So many of the younger staff don't know what a fondue pot is. This activity brought back memories to the residents and some of us "seasoned employees".

I posted a sign in the facility asking for fondue pots to borrow, buy or to be donated. I ended up receiving (5) of them as donations! We cannot use the ones with the flame for heating so needed them to be electric (which I never knew existed). We were lucky to get a couple electric ones.

We put cheese in one pot and chocolate in another pot, since we didn't want to deal with hot oil and cooking meat (we all know the risks of that). In the cheese we dipped chunks of french bread and mini hot dogs with the fancy little forks that come with a fondue pot. In the chocolate we dipped marshmallows, cherries and chunks of bananas.

It was a hit and in-expensive thanks to the donations of the fondue pots!
